FRANCES WILLARD HONORED.

Five Hundred Members of the Women's Christian Temperance Union Gather Around Her Statue at Washington.

Five hundred members of the national Women's Christian Temperance Union, which is in convention in Baltimore, gathered around the statue of Frances E. Willard, which the state of Illinois had placed in the nation's hall of fame at national capitol, Friday to pay a tribute to their noted leader. The principal feature was an address by Miss Anna A. Gordon, vice-president-general-at-large of the Women's Christian Temperance Union. She first thanked the "noble men of the state of Illinois" who had chosen Frances E. Willard as one of the two persons whose lives had been memorialized by statues in the nation's hall of fame.

At the conclusion of the eulogy on the life of the former leader of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, Miss Gordon said: "We white ribboners, consecrate ourselves anew, and will follow on, Frances Willard, the best we can in doing the work you so nobly inaugurated and will take for our motto the words of your sister as she passed beyond: 'Tell everybody to be good.' We cannot expect the goodness for which we pray in the heart, home and nation until the greatest stumbling block, the legalized traffic in liquor, is taken out of the heart, home and nation." Then as the chorus of "America" resounded through the halls, each member of the Illinois delegation passed by the statue and deposited a flower at the feet of the leader of their cause.

Indian Blankets.
Painful suspicions are liable to assail and linger with collectors who read about the "genuine Indian blankets" advertised by an Illinois corporation. "A generation ago," the advertisement runs, "we began making blankets for the Navajos, Cheyennes, Comanches, Sioux and other tribes. These blankets became famous. The Indians sold them for fabulous prices. The blankets at your dealers that bear the Blank trademark are identical with those that go to the Indian agencies, except that they are clean, sanitary, sweet, and of genuine quality. It is evidence of genuineness, in the form of dirt, which makes these latter souvenirs saleable to tourists. Furthermore, the advertisement offers a choice of two hundred designs, "the brilliant blankets of the northern tribes or the more subdued hues of the southwestern Indians," for $1.50. Perhaps in the light of these facts we would better modify our inherited conviction that the noble red man is an unsophisticated creature with no talent for business. Or shall we rest at the conclusion that genuine Indian blankets and genuine Indians are equally rare?

Southern Progress.
The south is not only making good the deficiency of former years in "hog and hominy" but is growing lay and fodder for its stock in quantities which go far to make its planters independent of the west. Not only so, but the southern wheat crop of 1910 exceeds by 26,000,000 bushels that of 1909, though there was a falling off in the production of other sections amounting to 71,000,000 of bushels. This is the high road to southern prosperity. Raise cotton and tobacco as money crops, but raise cereals and long foodstuffs to feed your hands and cattle. The better Mississippi section has grown rich on the thriftlessness of the southern farmer and planter. Norfolk Virginian-Pilot.

How the Lodge Members Got Out.
A laughable incident happened to the members of Blucher lodge, Hermann Sons, after meeting Saturday evening. William Jones, who has a barber shop in the building, closed his shop about 11 o'clock and not bearing any sound coming from the lodge room proceeded to put out the lights in the hallway and locked the outside door. When he reached home, the members of the lodge, who were engaged in auditing the books of the lodge did not hear Jones go out. After finishing their work they came out of the room and found the hall dark; they went down stairs and tried the door, which they found locked. They pounded on the door, thinking to make some one hear, but no one being near they had to take the hinges off the door and by breaking the lock they made their way out. Mr. Jones, on going to his shop Sunday morning discovered the damage to the door and thought that the place had been burglarized. After a while one of the members of the lodge happened along and explained the situation.

Big Crowd at Second Night of Firemen's Fair—Funeral of Mrs. Emily K. Gates—Coop Looted.

Tuesday evening Pioneer Hook and Ladder company held their second night of the fair, opening with a genuine old-fashioned New England supper from 5 to 8 o'clock. The young ladies who acted as waitresses were daintily attired in white dresses and fancy aprons. Everything delicious was served, as the committee in charge were experts in arranging the meal, which was served and social and persons. At 8 p. m. the brilliant sketch "Box and Cox" was put on, under the direction of Harry P. Noyes. The sketch is held in a city boarding house, introducing many mixups of the boarding house mistress and two boarders in several ways. Mr. Noyes, who is unusually clever as a stage director, did excellent work, as did Miss Susie Kelley as the boarding house mistress. Theodore Dewhurst did the part of Mr. Box in a clever manner. Harry Noyes being Mr. Cox. The entertainment was a taking feature of the evening.

The booth tenders were cheerful, as business was brisk. The same devices were used in the way of amusements as were Monday evening. The ship and disk throwing corners proved just as popular as before. Darning followed at 9 p. m. The attraction drew a big crowd.

An invitation has been extended the Noank companies for tonight, and a parade will be given by the Pioneer and Noank fire companies, headed by the Fire and Drum corps, to the hall. Dean Rogers' View of It.

The election of Simon E. Baldwin to be governor of Connecticut is one of the gratifying results of the recent election. It is the answer which that state makes to Theodore Roosevelt, a man who once commanded the respect of his political opponents, but who does so no longer. "The state of Connecticut does not take Mr. Roosevelt at his own estimation. It did not take at all kindly his uncalled for insult to a man who, in personal character and in intellect, is his superior. It is matter for profound regret, shared by thoughtful Americans of all parties, that a man who has filled the highest of all offices should descend to the depths which he reached in the recent campaign. The election returns make it very plain how mistaken he was when, adopting the language of the prize ring, he permitted himself to say: 'I've got 'em beaten to a frazzle and knocked clean through the ropes. I hit that Connecticut judge right between the eyes.' It is true that some one went through the ropes. Theodore Roosevelt now understands pretty well who it was that went through, and that his name was not Baldwin. At least he understands the matter if he has himself recovered from the daze." Dean H. W. Rogers of the Yale Law school in the Independent.

"The Excessive Use of Money."
What has Massachusetts come to when the nominee for governor of one party spends $37,000 and the other $29,000? Joseph Walker comes near the mark when he says: "I believe the greatest evil in politics today is the excessive use of money." Mr. Walker is financially able to keep up the pace, but he does not propose to do so. Just as good and better men than the speaker of the house could not spend any such sums as are recorded above if they would. It is full time these fit men were given some sort of a chance in a race for the governorship. Springfield Republican.
